“Is the Human Rights Corpus relevant today in view of the wide gap between ideals and reality?”

“Even if it be hypocrisy, it is significant – since hypocrisy, we know, is the homage that vice pays to virtue –

[because] ... governments today do not feel free to preach what they may persist in practicing” (Henkins)

“...we’re dealing with lives. Without you, Ukraine will be alone. We’ve proven our strength; we’re the same as you. Prove that you’ll not let us go. Then life will win over death"

"The modern state, then, is a contradictory institution: a promise of safety, security and meaning alongside a reality of abuse, control and coercion." (Jenny Edkins)

We struggle against Biopower: “the sovereign exercise of the power to determine who may live and who must die, “separates ... people into categories and subcategories, establishing boundaries between Some and Others – the condition for the acceptability of putting to death” (Mbembe)
USA:
750 military Bases in 80 countries;
Almost 80% of world weapons export

Military training to 40 of the 50 most oppressive, anti-democratic governments on earth.

“So as we rally to support Ukrainian civilians against great-power aggression from Russia, let’s do so with the understanding that imperialism should always be opposed, that all civilian victims of wars and violent coups are worthy whether Iraqi or Honduran or Ukrainian—and that all criminals who violate international law should be held accountable whether they’re based in Moscow or Washington, D.C.”

(Jeff Cohen, Director of Park Center for Independent Media, Ithaca College).
Can we transcend historic divides to build a global and community vision of an equal and shared humanity?

“We might probably all agree that in fact, we have not always convinced ourselves or others that the fact of our equal and shared humanity takes precedence or should take precedence over every other consideration of identity and status such as culture, nationality, gender, class, economic means, political affiliations etc.”

(Shestack)
“What makes certain rights universal, moral, and important, and who decides?”

NYS human rights law is not as far reaching as global conventions that seek to ensure assure human security, protect all vulnerable persons, collectively address public health and intergenerational rights.

We must draw on all conventions to make our claims for change; for instance, relying on CEDAW and VAWA to protect women against violence.
The Future of Tompkins County is written in the lives of the upcoming generation.

LACS students called for freedom:
From discrimination, of expression, for the protection of refugees, the right to healthcare and to education!

"To look into some aspects of the future, we do not need projections by supercomputers. Much of the next millennium can be seen in how we care for our children today.

- Kofi Annan (former Secretary-General of the United Nations)

We Need Glocal Solutions to Shared Problems

...for the reduction [or] elimination of conditions that foster human indignity, violence, poverty and powerlessness

To fight pandemics, ensure environmental survival, counter militarism and build peace, protect displaced persons, protect victims of domestic abuse, to care for all children and ensure equity and justice in our legal systems.

But “those norms and structures must be grown at home, and must utilize the cultural tools familiar to the people at the grassroots... What the human rights movement must not do is to close all doors, turn away other cultures, and impose itself in its current form and structure on the world. (Makau Mutua)
